HeLa cells. The fluorescence and absorption spectra of the bioluminescent tryptophan-rich model protein, 12-O-tetradecanoyl-phorbol-13-acetate-induced protein 1 (TAPP1) has been investigated in the presence of the antitumor agent NPI-1. The results from this study indicated that NPI-1 binds to TAPP1 and that the binding leads to a spectral change in the fluorescence and absorption spectra of this model protein. The ability of NPI-1 to increase the fluorescence of tryptophan and to quench the fluorescence of the tyrosine residues was also confirmed by steady-state and time-resolved spectroscopic studies. NPI-1 was found to shift the C = O stretching vibration from 1684 to 1666 cm⁻¹ and C-N stretching vibration from 1526 to 1512 cm⁻¹, respectively, suggesting that the nitrogen atom of the aromatic N-substituent attached to the aromatic C = O group, as is evident in the structure of NPI-1, is a plausible candidate for hydrogen bonding with the C = O group. The fluorescence of TAPP1 was quenched by NPI 595f342e71
